How to create a poster for research presentation

- 1) A poster for research presentation serves two purposes: as a tool for connecting with others and a means of communicating one's research.
- 2) When you give a poster presentation at a seminar or conference, you are providing information to your audience about the research you performed.
- 3) There is more than one way to design and display your project on a poster, just as there are many ways to present a slide show verbally. A few guidelines and factors are really important.
- 4) Many, however, do not produce a visually appealing conference poster so their chances of capturing attention and networking are slim.

Research Poster

- 1) A poster for research presentation typically consists of a brief text along with charts, illustrations, images, or other presentation elements with the purpose of providing a summary of findings in an appealing manner to help disseminate information and spur discussions.
- 2) Your poster can be arranged either in portrait or landscape format, depending on its size.
- 3) The organizers of seminars or conferences usually equip presenters with a presentation board and clipboards, as well as other equipment for holding and projecting poster presentations.
- 4) While other participants are watching the posters for research presentation and getting involved with the poster exhibit, the researcher stands nearby and explains it.

A research poster presentation

- A research poster presentation is often discussed, but also how to do it is important. It turns out that your poster can be used in a variety of ways, depending on where and to whom you are presenting.
- An overview of your research in five to ten minutes for people with no previous knowledge in your area. It is a two-three minute summary followed by a 10-minute question set that you present to someone with expertise in your field.
- The key here is to skip everything they already are familiar with and put the emphasis on the new content.
- There will also be people who will read your poster independently, either in case you are giving a presentation to someone else, you took a short break to see someone else's post, or because they generally opt to check out your poster first.

- Your poster should be suitable for all three categories of presentations. It also needs to have text large enough to be readable, as well as enough equations and tables so that you can present a discussion without reading the entire text.
- Just don't overdo it. Keep it simple and big. Please do not copy and paste from your paper. These paragraphs will usually involve a lot of text explaining. Visuals are essential for effective posters.

“SNAKES POSTER PREPARATION AND EXHIBITION”

Y. C. Warana Mahavidyalaya is based in rural area Warananagar. Warananagar is established on the Bank of Waran River. In Warananagar more than 70 percent population engaged in the farming business. Commonly it is observed that farmer receding in the field in the farm houses. It is common observation that near about 40 % crop yield is vanished due to attack of pests like rodent and insect crop pests. Small go-downs are preferably suitable place to attract poisonous and non poisonous snakes. In India near about 4000 people fail victim of snake bites and dead annually. Considering above fact Department of Zoology has organized exhibition of preserved snakes from Zoological museum and poster exhibition about snake life, its role in ecosystem, snake identification(distinguishing poisonous and non poisonous snakes) , first aids after snake bite

Near about 200 students (including staff and students) are benefited by this exhibition.

This precious event was organized by following staff of the department.
